'The possibility of utilizing the normal incidence August 6th, 2015 - The possibility of utilizing the normal incidence reflection coefficient of acoustic waves to characterize and study porous granular layers impedance surface has been solved in Matlab The results from the two models have been compared and parametric studies of non acoustical parameters have been also done The study concludes the possibility of a new non contact non destructive testing"SWAN download SourceForge

July 2nd, 2018 - developed Matlab code to obtain the frequency domain signals Following the existing phase shift method summed up normalized amplitude with varying phase velocity curve is determined which is very important for the identification of energy accumulation in the dispersion image space A commercially available software known as EasyMASW is introduced to obtain the shear wave velocity profile of'
